STUDY VISIT GUIDE
INDUCTION AND PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT FOR NEWLY QUALIFIED TEACHERS

FOR INTERNATIONAL DELEGATES
22-26 June 2015.

WHO ARE THE VISITS FOR?
This study visit is designed for policy makers interested in or responsible for the development of newly qualified teachers and continuing early professional development.

Participants will be interested in understanding more about the English education system including the teacher induction landscape in England and different models of supporting early professional development.

Please note: participants are required to have an intermediate level of English.

WHAT WILL THE STUDY VISIT FOCUS ON?

- Systems for Newly Qualified Teacher Induction and Early Professional Development
- Quality assurance
- Developing the next generation of teachers
- Working with support agencies
We will arrange a programme that includes:

- Sessions with national bodies to discuss the context of policy surrounding professional development for newly qualified teachers. These sessions will explore current national policy and anticipated future priorities, helping to make sense of a changing context and to understand how the organisation of schools fits within this.

- Visits to outstanding schools in London. Schools are selected for the quality of their work and successful efforts to raise achievement.

- Sessions run by experts in their field. Introduction and conclusion sessions will be led by a head teacher, academic or Local Authority expert on newly qualified teacher induction and will prepare participants for the rest of their study visit.

Sessions with national bodies will include presentations and discussions with representatives from the Department for Education, Ofsted and the UCL Institute of Education.

The provisional programme illustrates the typical structure of the visit. The running order and timings may be subject to change. A final programme will be confirmed and distributed to participants approximately two weeks before the study visit.
